Which parent would your kid live? When will the kid or kids see the parent without custodial rights? Who is responsible for financially support? Who will keep the matrimonial home? Who would be in charge of paying whatever debts incurred during the marriage? Furthermore, if you ran a family business, how will the business assets be divided?

Our firm will assist you in the preparation of a Separation Agreement which will provide comprehensive and clear answers to such questions. A formal written agreement is recommended so that you can be free to focus on your new life. This Separation Agreement, when finalized, is a binding agreement on both parties.

This kind of agreement can even get incorporated into the final Divorce Order. When you and your spouse agree to divorce and have agreement regarding all major problems this is known as an uncontested divorce. An uncontested divorce can proceed quickly through a three-part application procedure. Our duty is to assist you in the preparation of all required papers and to file them fast so that you can move on with your life.

Contested divorces result when you and your spouse cannot agree about the problems noted above. Court procedures should deal with those matters through informal negotiations between parties, settlement conferences and/or trials.
