

Langley Law

Langley Law - It is in the professional athlete's best interest to get legal support while constructing player contracts.

There are several similarities between player contracts and various legal contracts that lawyers deal with daily. Moreover, the athlete is commonly better represented by a third-party negotiator. Bonuses, salaries, and any other conditions that are outlined in the player contract could generally be raised via skilled, forceful negotiation.

Normally, the professional athlete is much more concerned with hitting home runs, providing entertainment, scoring goals and scoring touchdowns than they are with negotiating contracts. Because of our knowledge and expertise dealing with contract negotiations, our company has many clients who are professional athletes.