Insurance Lawyers Langley - If an insurance firm violates the terms of a written contract you are qualified to go to court. Nevertheless, the court typically only forces the insurance firms to pay what it would have owed you under contract.

If an insurance company has withheld payments intentionally, you could be entitled for extra-contractual damages. These damages may be awarded if the insurance company ignores or fabricates proof in addition to giving incomplete information of your claim. The damages granted consist of costs like for example interest payments and the loss of RRSPs, as well as compensation for mental suffering. Punitive and exemplary damages are awarded when insurance firms show especially malicious conduct.
